PRESIDENT'S ANNOUNCEMENTS

NEW YORK MEETING. The meeting of the Club projected for July 16th and 17th in New York had to be called off because of inability to obtain hotel accommodations and a meeting room. In an effort to avoid disappointing anyone who might be counting on such a meeting Secretary Robinson sent out cards to nearby members inviting them to a one-day meeting at his home in Lawrence, N. Y., on July 31st. On account of vacations and for other reasons your president was the only member able to attend. He and Robinson had a grand time going over each other's collections and making plans for the future of the Club.

NOVEMBER MEETING. There will be a meeting of the War Cover Club in New York City on November 19th and 20th. An effort is being made to obtain space at the Collectors Club for one of the evening meetings. Please communicate with member Maxwell Halpern or with Secretary Robinson if you wish hotel reservations. If no reservations are needed, let the Secretary know anyway that you will be there. At the meetings we shall discuss Club business, examine collections, buy, sell, and exchange, have a good time talking war covers, and incidently becoming better acquainted with each other.

AUCTION SALE. The Club will hold a mail auction of war covers early in November. The date will be announced later. Each member is asked to make donations of war covers to the sale. Each auction lot may consist of one cover or more than one, and the estimated sale value of each lot should be at least $1.00. I sincerely hope that every member will cooperate in making this auction a successful and profitable one. The proceeds will go into the Club treasury and will be used in getting out more and bigger issues of the Bulletin, in advertising our Club, in producing more research on various types of war covers, and, to sum it up, to give you more from your Club. Please send your contributions of sale material direct to Secretary H. K. Robinson, 315 Mulry Lane, Lawrence, New York, before the end of September. This will give him time to prepare and send to each member a copy of the auction list by the middle of October. Plan to bid liberally, - you will benefit.

MORE CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE BULLETIN ARE NEEDED FROM MORE MEMBERS. ANY WORTHWHILE NEWS ITEMS OR RESEARCH ARTICLES, LONG OR SHORT, WILL BE ACCEPTABLE. REMEMBER THAT THE BULLETIN IS DEVOTED TO INFORMATION CONCERNING THE POSTAL HISTORY OF ALL WARS. LET US HEAR ABOUT SOME OF YOUR SPECIAL INTERESTS. LACK OF EXPERIENCE IN WRITING IS NO EXCUSE. PUT DOWN YOUR INFORMATION AS BEST YOU CAN. THE EDITOR WILL BE GLAD TO HELP YOU POLISH IT UP FOR PUBLICATION.

"FREE" FRANKED COVERS WITH R. M. S. POSTMARKS

by Hershel E. Rankin

Most collections of military covers follow a standard pattern. Why not have something different in your collection? Of course you want the A. P. O. cancel from every A. P. O. number that you can obtain, and you want the cover censored if possible. But for something different have you obtained a soldier's letter with naval cancel or a marine's letter sent through an army camp post office? Another type of out-of-the-ordinary cancel will be described below.

Early in the conflict the armed forces were granted the "free" franking privilege. As the war developed "free" mail gave way to a great extent to Air Mail and V-Mail, especially among the forces overseas, because of the much greater speed in delivery. However, there was still much "free" mail used by the men in the army camps in this country.

Most camps had their own post offices which offered the same facilities as civilian post offices. Some of the air fields specializing in only one form of training and some of the other smaller training centers did not cancel and dispatch their own mail, but sent it to the post office of which the camp or air field post office was a branch. This is similar to the civilian contract post office arrangement. The majority of "free" franked military covers posted in this country therefore bear either the postmark of a training center or of a nearby town or city. Town postmarks were rather favored because the public as a whole was uninformed as to the location of training centers. It seemed that a boy from Florida was always being sent to Oregon or North Dakota, then to Texas or Massachusetts, before sent to the Pacific from San Francisco. In being transferred soldiers were not permitted to do much letter mailing, but even so many letters were mailed from motor convoys and from trains.

It is these letters mailed from and on trains that we are interested in at this time. When a train loaded with soldiers was changing engine crews at a junction point and employee of the railroad would often be handed some soldiers' letters to mail. These were usually taken to the "Transfer Office" in the mail sorting room of the railway station where they were postmarked and sent on to the old home town to let the parents know that their boy was being transferred. Often the soldier did not know where he was at the time of writing, much less where he was going. The "transfer office" is a stationary part of the Railway Mail Service. It is the duty of the "Transfer Clerk" to see to the proper transfer of mail from one train to another, the actual work sometimes being done by porters of the railroad company. A box is usually provided at some convenient place in the railroad station where letters may be deposited for mailing. The transfer clerk collects the mail from these boxes and after cancelling it at the transfer office dispatches it in the proper direction on the next train. The postmark used is similar to the hand-stamp cancel used at any post office. It is identified by the words "Transfer Office" or "Transfer Clerk" in addition to the city location, date, etc. The killer bars contain the letters RMS. Sometimes the RMS cancel is that of a "Terminal R. P. O.", which is larger than a transfer office. Its principal purpose is the distribution of parcel post and circular mail, though letters are worked in limited quantities.

Most of the letter mail is handled and distributed on trains in mail cars fitted up like post offices and called "railway post offices". There are about a thousand of them in the U. S. Each railway post office has a slot on each side of the car in which letters may be dropped for mailing. Sometimes the soldier's letter was deposited in the mail car of the train on which he was riding, or on a passenger train following the army train. The postmark of the train is shown by the name of the railway post office. The R. P. O. is designated by the name of the cities or towns between which it runs: i. e., "New York & Chicago R. P. O.", with train number and date. Eastbound and southbound trains have odd numbers, while northbound and westbound trains are even numbered. The R. P. O. designation is the same for both directions. Thus there is no "Chicago & New York R. P. O." The northern or eastern terminus is the first named.

So if you have a "free" franked soldier's cover with R. M. S. postmark, you probably have a cover which if properly interpreted would tell an interesting story. If this story is known and properly written up on an album page along with the cover it will make an interesting exhibit.

I have often been asked to give the location of some of these RPO's running between little known towns on branch line railroads. Even though I am a member of the Railway Mail Service it has sometimes been difficult to identify them. A group of collectors is interested in the markings of letters posted on trains and has compiled a listing of the routes. Their journal is THE TRANSIT POSTMARK of which at present I am the editor. Each issue gives changes and corrections in the list of RPO's as well as railway history and other information.

Whether going or coming the mail, even air mail, is handled by employees of the Railway Mail Service. Look through your war covers and see if you have any "free" franked with R. P. O. cancel. Then think of the part that the railway postal clerk played in maintaining one of the great morale factors of the war, the mail.

The Postal Bulletin reports the following APO's re-activated through New York, effective July 15th: 10, 11, 12, 13, 16, 17, 19, 22, 23, 26, 28, 29, 30, 34, 35, 36, 39, 42, 44.

Several members of the Club are compiling an illustrated list of special postmarks and cachets used on mail from the ships of the United States Fleet that participated in the occupation of Japan. Members having such covers are asked to send a brief description of them to the editor.

POST OFFICES AT FORTS IN THE UNITED STATES

The late Milton B. Hunt, first president of this Club, was much interested in covers from forts and military camps in this country. Among the papers left by him is a letter of August, 1940, from the Chief Post Office Inspector in Washington in reply to a request from Mr. Hunt for information concerning post offices established at various forts. Since the information in this letter is taken from official records and much of it is new, we are pleased to have the opportunity to publish it here.

"Records available in the Department do not show a post office at Fort McHenry, Maryland. It is indicated that mail for the fort is handled by the Baltimore office.

"The records show that a post office was established at Fort Hamilton, New York, on February 16, 1833, with Benjamin R. Pierce as postmaster. It is shown that the office was discontinued on April 30, 1896, and is now a station of the Brooklyn post office.

"The post office at Fort Totten, New York, was established as Willets Point on August 24, 1891, with Mrs. Julia Martin as the postmaster. It is shown that the name of the office was changed to Fort Totten on April 24, 1902, and that the office was discontinued on September 30, 1918, the mail being ordered sent to Fort Totten Station of the Flushing post office. The office is at present a station of the Flushing post office.

"There is no record of a post office ever being established at Fort Slocum, New York. The records show that Fort Slocum is an independent station of New Rochelle, New York.

"The post office at Fort Flagler, Washington, was established on January 27, 1900, with Cart Troiel as postmaster. The office was discontinued on May 15, 1933, the mail being ordered sent to Nordland.

"The post office at Fort Stevens, Oregon, was established on February 20, 1899, with Edward M. Philebaum as the postmaster. The records show that the office is still in operation.

"The records indicate that the post office at Fort Gay, West Virginia, was established in Virginia on September 18, 1855, with William Ferguson as the postmaster. It is shown that the office was discontinued on February 3, 1860, and re-established on May 9, 1867, and that it is still in operation.

"The records show that the post office at Fort Logan, Colorado, was established on May 31, 1889, with Mrs. Alvira B. Meyers as the postmaster. It is indicated that the office is still in operation.

"The records indicate that the post office at Fort Screven, Georgia, was established on January 15, 1904, with Alice F. Evans as the postmaster. It is indicated that the office is still in operation."

Also in Mr. Hunt's papers are the following notes which he gathered concerning Fort Leavenworth.

"In 1824 the citizens of Missouri petitioned Congress for a military post at the Arkansas Crossing of the Santa Fe Trail. The Secretary of War decided in 1827 to establish a fort in Western Missouri. Col. Henry Leavenworth completed the assignment on May 8, 1827. It was first called Cantonment Leavenworth. It was partially evacuated between 1827 and 1829. Reoccupied in 1829, it was called Fort Leavenworth in 1832. The fort became an important starting point for a number of military expeditions to the Far West and a supply depot for frontier forts. To 1846 it was occupied by the 6th Infantry. It had an important location during the Civil War."

Extract from a letter from Lt. Commander H. F. Rommel, who commanded the USS Wilkes at the time of the occupation of Japan.

"I claim that the Wilkes is the first ship to use a name cancel in the postwar period.... On the 15th of August (the surrender date) I told the mail clerk to put the name of the ship in the bars. He did, but he did not date the cancel until we entered port, so that the first date of use is August 19th.... There is a story on the Wilkes' cachets too (a blue anchor, etc.). One of the officers had them printed on a repair ship in Korea...."

"Although it may not look so, the (inscription) U.S.S./Wilkes was glued to the cancel, not stamped in separately."

THE "ADC" CENSOR STAMP

By A. J. Tripp

In October, 1941, construction was begun on two airfields; one at Cold Bay on the Alaskan Peninsula west of Kodiak Island (APO 944), the other at Otter Point on Umnak Island, which is located just South West of Dutch Harbor (APO 948). These were built for the defense of the Naval Base at Dutch Harbor. Both fields were constructed under the guise of Private business enterprises concerned with salmon fishing and canning. The two cover names were THE BLAIR PACKING CO. and THE SAXTON CO., and the peculiar canning machinery consisted of bulldozers, power shovels, and similar equipment. The top holding company for these enterprises was THE CONSOLIDATED PACKING CO. of Anchorage, known in military circles as the Alaska Defense Command. History tells us that the Japs were surprised on their first raid of Dutch Harbor, June 3, 1943, when they had expected the nearest U. S. planes to be based at Kodiak, nearly 600 miles away.

The 11th Air Force was first known as the "Alaska Defense Command" on August 12, 1940. It was designated the "Alaska Air Force" on January 15, 1942, and became officially the "11th Air Force" on February 5, 1942. In May, 1942, a field headquarters was established at Kodiak and planes were deployed at Cold Bay and Umnak.

The letters "ADC" found on early censor marks apparently signify then "Alaska Defense Command" and not "Alaska District Censor", as has sometimes been asserted.
