

AMERICAN NORTH RUSSIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES (“POLAR BEARS”)

ROSTER

1918 – 1919

Dedicated to the Polar Bears

On 4 September 1918, units from the 85th Division (339th Infantry Regiment, 337th Field Hospital, 337th Ambulance Company, 1st Battalion, 310th Engineer Regiment) arrived in Archangel, Russia, followed by reinforcements on 1 October. These troops left the following June. Transportation Corps troops arrived in Murmansk in March and April 1919 and left in July. Vastly outnumbered, under horrendous field conditions, and with no clear purpose other than their own survival, these men fought the Red Army long after the end of World War 1. The bodies of most of the 233 who died were eventually recovered, but 23 are still buried in lost graves in Russia.

This roster contains the names of all 6064 soldiers who were sent to north Russia. It is a corrected version of a list compiled by Lt. Col. Roderick A. Hosler, U.S. Army (Ret.), and published in 2019 at grobbel.org/pbma/roster/. The sources are troopship manifests, draft cards, headstone applications, interment forms, service records, Graves Registration Service burial cards, ANREF records (ancestry.com or fold3.com), headstones (findagrave.com), unpublished diaries and letters (Bentley Historical Library at University of Michigan), media articles (newspapers.com), Mike Grobbel's website: Detroit's Own Polar Bear Memorial Association (pbma.grobbel.org), and the following books:
